The Moon

In astrology, The moon represents our feelings, our inner emotions, our instinctive reactions and responses to situations. the moon rules the subconscious, our deeper feelings and needs which motivate us toward action.

The moon is strongly linked to our sense of security, and indicates that which we require in order to feel safe and comfortable in life, and the type of environment we tend to feel the most comfortable and secure within. The moon in our chart provides clues as to our childhood conditions, and the domestic situation in which we were raised.

The moon is tied to the mother, and offers a description of her as seen through our experience. It is an indication of the nurturing we received as a child, and the degree to which we are capable of nurturing others as well. It also represents other significant women in the life of the person; grandmother, wife etc. This is important for a man, as the moon (and Venus) describe the type of woman a man will be drawn to (the sun and mars for women).

The moon governs habits, intuition, and instincts, and is said to be the second most important influence in the birth chart, next to the sun. It is the part of us that just reacts without thinking, that knows something without any rational way of knowing, that experiences irrational likes and dislikes for people, things, and situations. The moon is the inner self we possess, an inner self that some people have great difficulty expressing in the outer world.

The moon also represents the domestic environment. The sign that the moon is located in will show the manner in which one reacts and responds naturally and immediately to situations, and provides information about the inner, personal life of someone.

The house in which the moon resides in will point to the area of life one feels most comfortable within, and where one gains their sense of security.

Moon in Aries

Those born with moon in Aries have passionate emotions and their immediate response to most situations is to take action. You are quick to act when interested in something or someone, though you're also likely to become quickly bored and move on to something new, you love a challenge, and tend to lose interest once something (or someone) has been conquered.

You can easily become bored in any area of life where no challenge exists. You enjoy the chase in a relationship, and may become bored once you have caught the object of your affection, you may then become less passionate and affectionate as a result.

You have a strong need for independence; you rely on yourself and trust your own judgments, opinions, and instincts above those of others, and hate being told what to do.

You are good at making quick decisions, though the down side of that is that you do not always think things through before acting, you tend to immediately act upon your emotions and desires, which may cause you to make quite a few mistakes.

Because you so value independence you may be reluctant to make emotional commitments in relationships, though you are capable of making a commitment if you so choose.

You are competitive, and feel a need to come first and win in whatever competition you choose. You want to feel strong. Your independence, desire to feel strong, and need for immediate action may cause you to be a risk taker, and perhaps be a bit reckless at times, you may have even received a few head injuries to show for this tendency to rush into things. You may also be quite susceptible to headaches.

Men with moon in Aries may have an above average amount of difficulties in their dealings with women.

You can have an extremely quick temper, easily becoming irritated, frustrated, and annoyed. You can often say things in haste that you may later regret. You can be very impatient with other people, as well as with all aspects of your life.

(Depending on other factors in the chart) you are not likely to be described as patient or calm by anyone. Though you are quick to anger, you are also quick to forgive and forget, (depending on other mediating factors in chart) you do not usually hold a grudge.

Honesty can be one of your best and worst traits, you usually say exactly what you think with no attempt to sugar coat it or to first stop to consider the impact your words may have on others. Though this may occasionally cause some hurt feelings, people who know you will tend to respect your opinions, knowing that they are your true opinions and that they can rely on your honesty.
